German Ladies and Families.

As short time since, I attended a fair given by the Crown Princess of Prussia, the daughter of Queen Victoria, in her palace, for the benefit of the wounded soldiers of the late war, and saw her and a number of Baronesses, Countesses, and court ladies, and had an opportunity of observing closely their style of dress; and I do not hesitate to say that I have often seen ladies at the South, with moderate fortunes, dress far more expensively than they did. A few days ago, I accidentally heard of the Crown Princess refusing to purchase certain articles which she really needed, because they cost too much. Any fashionable lady at the South would gladly buy these articles at double the sum for which they were offered to the Crown Princess. I could write much more on this subject, but these simple statements will enable you to form some idea of the manner in which ladies dress in Berlin, the capital city of Prussia. The idea of economy and neatness in regard to dress, which an American young lady would inevitably receive by spending a year in Berlin, would be well worth the amount of money required to defray her expenses, if she were benefited in no other way whatever.

I have noticed that in German families, family government is very strict, compared with the theory and practice in America on this subject, I may say, extremely rigid. The rules and regulations are few, but they are enforced on all occasions and under all circumstances. Unquestioning submission to the parental authority, lies at the foundation of this government. Children are taught to entertain the highest respect for superiors and for age. It is beautiful to see the respectful manner in which they deport themselves in the presence of their superiors and older persons. They are also invariably polite to strangers. A few weeks ago, a friend and myself made an excursion on foot into the country, and we were surprised at the genuine politeness of the poor peasants and their children. Every peasant and child we met, saluted us in the kindest manner possible, and readily and pleasantly answered all our questions. Children are early taught to be industrious and self-reliant. They are not allowed to call servants to do for them things which they can do easily themselves. Every boy is trained for some business or profession, and the girls are trained to make good housekeepers and good wives. In the best families, servants very seldom wait on the table—not even when guests are invited.

A took tea, not long since, at the house of a Baroness, with a large party, and not a servant was seen. The Baroness made tea after we were seated at the table, with a convenient and elegant apparatus prepared for the purpose, and two beautiful young ladies, a niece of the Baroness and a friend, passed around the table and served the guests.

On a certain occasion, I called on a wealthy family, and was received by the lady of the house, who told me that her two daughters were in the kitchen cooking. They were both to be married soon, and a professional cook had been employed to come three times a week, to give them lessons in the art of cooking, and initiate them fully into all its mysteries. In five minutes, one of these young ladies came into the parlor to see me, neatly dressed, and conversed with me in beautiful English.

A thorough acquaintance with domestic economy is considered an indispensable qualification in a young lady for the married life. In addition to all this, mothers teach their daughters that one of their chief duties after marriage, is to strive to make their husbands comfortable and happy. When a German husband comes to his home, at the close of a day of toil and anxiety, his wife receives him with a smile, arranges his armchair, brings him his study gown and slippers, places before him refreshments, gets him a cigar, and while he eats and smokes, converses with him in the most entertaining manner, about the events of the day. What will your lady friends say to this picture of domestic life in Germany?—Rev. R. M. Saunders.

RIGHTS OF MARRIED WOMEN.—In the Court of Appeals, at Louisville, an important decision has just been made affecting the marital rights of women, and holding that a husband cannot control or open a wife's private correspondence. The following is part of the decision:

Nor would we admit that in this age and country a husband's rightful authority gives him during marriage dominion over his wife's chaste and friendly correspondence, not affecting her rights; nor that in all plenitude of his marital power he could, without her free consent, take from her or destroy or in any way control the possession or gift of such letters. Any such ungracious interference with her confidential correspondence would impair social confidence and disturb domestic peace, and ought not to be encouraged by the judiciary, especially as it could do him no other good than to gratify a jealous and prying curiosity.

According to befitting decorum, and in every valuable sense, such letters, written to her by her husband, are hers, and it is her duty, for reasons satisfactory to her own taste and judgment, to choose not to give them to her husband, she has a right to keep them to herself as her own inviolable property, and a confiding wife will never withhold from a good husband confidential letters, without a good and sufficient reason. The existing code of both British and American law recognizes the personal individuality and moral responsibility of wives, and consequently guarantees their freedom of thought and interchange of sentiments with their husbands, their own, their emotions their own, and their affections their own. Here and now a husband must not be a tyrant, and ought not to be a spy on his wife, who is neither his slave or his mistress, but should always be his free and equal companion.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.
Without making a useless harangue, I will say to my friends and the public that I am not prepared to supply all their wants in the way of STOVES. It is time lost to undertake to look for anything better than can be found in my store. I have something new in the way of HEATING STOVES, which cannot be surpassed in style, or beauty of design. To one and all I will say that whatever I sell I warrant to answer the purpose I sold it for. I therefore invite my country friends to call and examine my stock of COOKING and HEATING STOVES before purchasing elsewhere, confident that they will not go away displeased. I would also enumerate amongst my stock a fine lot of TINWARE of my own manufacture, and made by very experienced workmen; also, TINNED SAFES, PRESERVING KETTLES, Fruit Cans, Fine Japanned and Painted Ware and Chamber Sets, to which I would call the attention of the public. Coffee Urns, Tea Urns, Wall Irons, Children's Toys, and a fine lot of Block Tin Ware and other articles which are too numerous to mention. Thankful for past patronage I hope to have a continuance of the same.
